

The will to power as the general character of life: an interpretation from the writings of the second period

Jelson Roberto de Oliveira*

Abstract:

This article aims to propose an interpretation that links the concept of will to power the conception of life in the writings of F. Nietzsche. For this, we'll use the writings of the second period of production of the German philosopher, which shows, so anticipatory, this relationship, which show prominent in the writings from 1885. It will examine the notion of life as value that cannot be evaluated because it is marked by the expansion of forces in its illogical nature.

Keywords: Will to power; Life; Human.

---

* Professor do Curso de Filosofia da Pontifícia Universidade Católica do Paraná. Doutor em Filosofia pela Universidade Federal de São Carlos, onde defendeu tese sobre a amizade em Nietzsche.